A detective struggles with a murder and her past in HBO's 'Mare of Easttown'

A detective investigates a murder that upends life in her hometown, thus forcing her to confront expectations from her past in a limited drama series upcoming on HBO.

In "Mare of Easttown," a seven-part series premiering Sunday, April 18, Kate Winslet ("Ammonite," "Titanic") is cast in the role of Mare Sheehan, a 40-something police detective who investigates when a child's lifeless body is pulled from a local creek, a troubling crime that rocks her titular small Pennsylvania town.

It turns out the investigator herself is troubled. The daughter of a detective, now deceased, she has struggled with expectations ever since she made the winning shot in a highschool basketball championship game 25 years earlier. She doesn't get along with her mother, Helen (Jean Smart, "Watchmen"), and spends her idle hours at the bar, where she hooks up with Richard (Guy Pearce, "Mildred Pierce"), a local writing professor. But she has a confidante in Lori (Julianne Nicholson, "August: Osage County"), her protective best friend since childhood.

The role was a challenging one for Winslet, who was just coming off playing British paleontologist Mary Anning in the 2020 feature film "Ammonite," and thus struggled to get into this completely different character's headspace.

"She's nothing like me," says Winslet, who won an Oscar for "The Reader." "So that's pretty scary in a great way if you're an actor like me who likes to feel terrified and exposed. And I just had never done anything like this, (I) was excited to read something that just gripped me right away. I really felt the sense of not just who she was, but the world that she lives in, where she comes from, that sense of community, being so entrenched in a society that you sort of forget who you are from time to time, and the sense of responsibility/burdens that Mare carries – for lots of reasons to do with her backstory – really, really intrigued me."

For the part of Mare, Winslet did months of prep work, spending time with police departments in Easttown and Marple Township outside of Philadelphia and working extensively with series creator Brad Ingelsby, a native of that area, to get the dialect and accent right. But in the end, it was one universal theme that enabled Winslet to connect with the character.

"That real sense of family and how much it means to her to hold that together at all costs," the British actress says. "And also to be able to admit to herself from time to time that she has failed in a lot of areas and tries desperately to correct those errors and to hold everyone as close to her as she can, even if she's a difficult person to live with from time to time. It doesn't change the fact that her love for her family is the thing that bolts her down and drives her in life and is her number one priority. And that was something that I was able to connect with in the midst of all these other things that were so far away and so far removed from myself.

Randle leads Knicks out of the desert and into the playoffs

Don't look now but after two decades of questionable player moves, bad management and even worse basketball, the New York Knicks are about to make the playoffs.

Yes, the team that many picked to spend another season at the bottom of the Eastern Conference standings have quietly defied the experts and maintained a won-lost record around .500 - and leading the way is their All-Star power forward, Julius Randle.

In the 26-year-old product of Plano, Texas, the Knicks have a player in the midst of a career year, at this writing registering teamleading per-game averages of 23 points, 10.8 rebounds and 5.8 assists. Those are all major upticks from his career numbers of 16.8, 9.2 and 3.1. But another area in which he has sought improvement is maturity and leadership, and he credits his 4-year-old son with showing him the way.

Young Kyden watches his father intently during Knicks games and even imitates some of his on-court mannerisms when he plays against his dad. So when the boy flashed Dad's "Are you kidding? No call?" look at his mother, who was refereeing during one pick-up game last season, that was all Julius needed to see. With a mirror held up, Randle didn't like the reflection - and just like that an attitude adjustment was born.

As the No. 1 scoring option on a young Knicks team, Randle knows he'll be in opponents' crosshairs as the team seeks its first postseason appearance in eight seasons. And not only is he ready for it, he welcomes it – which is what a leader does.

Randle and the Knicks can be seen in action twice this week on ESPN: Sunday, April 18, hosting the New Orleans Pelicans and at home against the Toronto Raptors on Saturday, April 24.

Philanthropist comes to the aid of pandemic-stricken eateries on 'Restaurant Recovery'

Todd Graves is a big believer in the American dream.

As founder and CEO of Raising Cane's Chicken Fingers, he's built a $2 billion business with more than 530 restaurants and 35,000 employees across the United States and more than reaped the rewards of entrepreneurship. So when the pandemic struck and he watched family-owned and -operated restaurants struggle and fail, he knew he had to help. And thus "Restaurant Recovery" was born.

Currently streaming on discovery+, the 10-episode series follows Graves and his Raising Cane team as they work directly with owners struggling to hang on, offering creative ideas and common sense renovations designed to maximize resources, bring revenues back up to their previous levels and keep these eateries in business.

'They couldn't prepare for this ...," Graves says of the restaurateurs, "You make small margins on large volumes in restaurants. You just don't make a ton of money off of them and you couldn't save enough money. It's just one of these things and all of a sudden your sales drop and you still have to pay your rent and you still have to pay your utilities and you still have to pay your crew. You have all those expenses going out and the dollars don't come in. I mean, these people's businesses went down – I was shocked at some who were 50 percent and then some of them were 75 percent and it broke my heart what was going on with the Graves and his crew went to eateries in locales such as Los Angeles, Denver, Chicago and Baton Rouge, La., and offered up ideas such as converting their service to outdoor dining, takeout and delivery and even bottling and selling homemade creations like barbecue sauce. He also made suggestions on COVID-19 safety, gave direct financial relief to owners drowning in debt and even enlisted celebrity friends such as rappers Snoop Dogg and Nelly, actor Rob Schneider, NFL star Archie Manning and NBA great Shaquille O'Neal to give their support.

"I'd known Shaq from back in Baton Rouge days," Graves says of O'Neal, who attended college in that city at Louisiana State University, "so I called him and told him what we were doing and he said, 'Man, I'm happy to help.' And with him, you can imagine the spirits lifted when he walked in the room. And Snoop and I are friends. He came out and he was like, 'These are familyowned restaurants. This is what we should be helping.' ...

"But this was the easiest ask I'd ever had for anybody, celebrity contact or friend that I know," he continues. "They all jumped on it. I didn't have one person that didn't want
