Sam Elliott stars in "1883," premiering Sunday on Paramount+ and Paramount Network.

Sam Elliott takes viewers back to '1883' in new 'Yellowstone' prequel

Especially with so few Westerns being made now, it's little surprise that a new one would hold great appeal for Sam Elliott.

However, there was an extra lure for the "A Star Is Born" Oscar nominee: the writing of Taylor Sheridan, the co-creator of the successful series "Yellowstone," which now is yielding a Paramount+ prequel with the Elliott-starring "1883." Premiering Sunday, Dec. 19, the drama casts him as a late-19th-century cowboy who guides settlers from Texas to Montana. Among them, played by music-superstar spouses Faith Hill and Tim McGraw, are ancestors of John Dutton ... Kevin Costner's "Yellowstone" character. (The premiere will be simulcast on Paramount Network.)

"We started at the end of August in 100-plus-degree weather in Texas," the friendly, famously deep-voiced Elliott says of the filming. It took him away from his actress wife Katharine Ross (both appeared in "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid"), and he reports, "It was grueling for everyone. It meant wearing wool, so it was tough. And we've headed since to Montana, where we're likely to get snowed on."

Elliott notes his "1883" character, Shea Brennan, is "carrying a heavy load" from his family history and serving in the Civil War. The actor appreciates that "Taylor writes these arias that are gifts. It's not just the words (Brennan) says but where they come from, and it's great playing someone who has more going on than meets the eye."

Before "1883" started production, Elliott hadn't met Hill and McGraw. "They went to a 'cowboy camp,' because a lot of people hadn't ridden horses when we started this thing – and when I got to Texas and joined them, everyone was in the mood. I hadn't ridden a horse in 20 years, and I was very leery about it, but it's like riding a bicycle. You never forget how, but with that said, you've got to get back in condition and be confident."

Once a star of such shows as "Mission: Impossible" and "The Yellow Rose," Elliott has been involved in streaming series such as "The Ranch" and "Grace and Frankie" more recently, but those didn't entail the work demands "1883" does. Still, he maintains, "I'm up to it. It's been a while since I've done something like this, but based on the fact that it was Taylor Sheridan, there was no passing on it."

Elliott admits he hasn't been a viewer of "Yellowstone," but he notes that where "1883" is concerned, "I've had great fortune in that genre from the beginning. I've always felt a good Western has three classic elements: man against man, man against nature, and man against himself. And here it is again, particularly man against himself, in this character."

Relax. We've got this.

DISCOVER FLORIDA'S FIRST LIGHTHOUSE

In 1875, Major William A. Harn became Head Keeper of the St. Augustine Lighthouse. Keeper Harn and his wife Kate, along with their daughters, became the first residents of the Keepers' House. Life at a light station was busy, and everyone would help tend to the light and grounds. One aspect of this was to greet and entertain visitors. The Harn children loved hearing stories from the outside world as Kate served lemonade on the porch of the Keepers' House.

The Harn family lived and worked at the light station from 1876 until 1889. After William's passing, Kate served as the Second Assistant before moving the family into town and later returning home to Maine. The photograph above was taken at the Harn family home in Maine during the 1920s. Among those pictured are Kate and five of her six daughters.

Melo thriving in supporting role for Lakers

On Christmas Day, Dec. 25, NBA fans will find the gift of basketball under their tree – about 13 hours of it, in fact, in games televised nationally.

Probably the centerpiece match-up of the annual holiday quintupleheader comes in prime time on ESPN, when one of the West's better teams, the Los Angeles Lakers, defend the home court of the just-renamed Crypto.com Arena from the No. 1 team in the East, the Brooklyn Nets.

And under the Lakers' tree has been one of the more pleasant surprises of the 2021-22 season – the resurgence of Carmelo Anthony, albeit in a limited role.

Through the season's first two months, the 10-time All-Star and 2013 scoring champ has been deadly from three-point range, hitting on about 44 percent of his shots from beyond the arc. Of course, that's a pace that's hard to maintain but the fact that at age 37 he's still doing it is remarkable in itself.

This, after all, was a man who was essentially out of the game in 2018 after refusing to accept that he was no longer the go-to guy. As a former star and an almost-certain Hall-of-Famer, agreeing to a reduced role is a hard pill to swallow. But the fact that he's done it not only has gained him the further respect of teammates and opponents, but also the gratitude of the Laker faithful.

On a star-studded Lakers roster, Anthony fits in well as an uber-valuable sixth man, able to rebound and score proficiently. And his 19 years of NBA experience will certainly serve him and his team as they drive for a playoff berth.

FULL NAME: Carmelo Kyam Anthony

BIRTH DATE: May 29, 1984

Disney works get immortalized in food in Disney+'s 'Foodtastic'

Anyone who craves to see scenes from Disney productions depicted in food will find a competition series to their liking on Disney+.

In "Foodtastic," which premieres Wednesday, Dec. 15, teams of food artists create detailed and extravagant pieces of art depicting scenes from Disney intellectual properties, be it "Ant Man," "Star Wars," "The Avengers" or "Pirates of the Caribbean," from vegetables, fruit, nuts, melted chocolate and other foodstuffs. But unlike cake decorating shows where the final products can be consumed, these sculptures are not edible – that is, unless you like substances like glycerin mixed in with your chocolate.

The winner is determined by judges and food art experts Amirah Kassem and Benny Rivera. Emmy-winning actress Keke Palmer serves as host and the audience's guide to the action, when she's not acting in segments introducing the storylines.

"I'm literally just being my normal curious self and asking, 'What's going on? What are you using? What are you doing there?' And learning quite a lot, I might add," says Palmer, who is also an executive producer here. "But also being blown away by how these people transformed the elements of food into these unbelievable, museum-like art pieces. I just didn't know anything like that existed so I was genuinely surprised and inquisitive about how they were going to go about it – without trying to bug them too much, of course."

The backgrounds of the contestants here are varied, ranging from food professionals to architects, animators and construction workers. And the set of the show changes with the storyline, so the "Ant-Man" episode takes place in a forest and the "Pirates of the Caribbean" set will be at sea.

The one constant in this setting is the virtual sun. The contestants have from sun up until sundown to complete their pieces. In real time, that's about a day and a half, a far cry from the weeks a typical food art show allows. As the sun reaches the horizon, Palmer issues the final warning and the pressure ramps up. The reactions are all over the map.

"Some (contestants) were like, 'I'm used to the pressure, no big deal ...,'" Palmer notes. "Some became very funny and entertaining under the pressure. Other people were really having anxiety problems, stomach aches, being just stressed out. You know, it was a lot of different emotions going on. And that's my job when I put on my hosting hat, to really hopefully make them feel comfortable."

"The main thing that's important to use is everybody's safety and feeling good under this pressure. Because the reality is they usually are allotted a lot more time. ... So this was a lot of pressure for them to be under and they all excelled."

“Mr. Popper’s Penguins” (Available now)

Jim Carrey’s co-stars aren’t merely for the birds in this 2011 comedy-fantasy based on a long-popular children’s book: They actually are birds, who get a huge assist from computer animation.
